

I recommend you not pursue Broadband Over Power Line without much more research into the interference this may cause to existing radio services. Power lines have never been designed with RF shielding for this use. Broadband over telephone or cable can still be improved to meet the need.